N.C.P.I.-Civil. 102.35 CONTENTIONS OF NEGLIGENCE. GENERAL CIVIL VOLUME MARCH 1994

102.35 CONTENTIONS OF NEGLIGENCE.

In this case, the plaintiff contends, and the defendant denies, that the defendant was negligent in one or more of the following ways:

(Read all contentions of negligence supported by the evidence.)

The plaintiff further contends, and the defendant denies, that the defendant's negligence was a proximate cause of the plaintiff's [injury] [damage].

I instruct you that negligence is not to be presumed from the mere fact of [injury] [damage].

(Give law as to each contention of negligence included above.)
