

745.07 NEW MOTOR VEHICLES WARRANTIES ACT ("LEMON LAW") -
DAMAGES WHEN PLAINTIFF IS A PURCHASER.

(This document has two attachments: A. Formula for Damages Form; and B. Formula for Reasonable Allowance Form. Directions for accessing the attachments appear at the end of this document, immediately above the endnotes.)

NOTE WELL: Appendices contain worksheets that the Court may want to provide to the jury, but it is not mandatory to do so.

The (state number) issue reads:

"What amount of damages is the plaintiff entitled to recover from the defendant?"¹

You will answer this issue only if you have answered the (state number) issue "Yes" in favor of the plaintiff² and the (state number) issue "Yes" in favor of the plaintiff³ [and the (state number) issue "No" in favor of the plaintiff].⁴

On this issue the burden of proof is on the plaintiff. This means that the plaintiff must prove, by the greater weight of the evidence, the amount of damages which the law permits the plaintiff to recover.⁵ The following items may be recovered by the plaintiff:⁶ (1) the full contract price including, but not limited to, charges for undercoating, dealer preparation and transport, installed options and nonrefundable portions of extended warranty and service contracts;⁷ (2) all collateral charges including, but not limited to, sales tax, license and registration fees, and similar government charges;⁸ (3) all finance charges incurred by the plaintiff after he first reported the nonconformity to the defendant;⁹ and (4) any incidental and monetary consequential damages.¹⁰ Incidental damages include any reasonable expenses incurred by the plaintiff incident to the defendant's [failure] [inability] to conform the (name vehicle) to the express warranty covering that vehicle.¹¹ Monetary consequential damages include monetary losses proximately resulting from the breach of warranty, but do not include non-monetary damages to the plaintiff for such things as embarrassment, emotional distress or pain and suffering.¹² A monetary loss proximately results from a breach of warranty if it would not have occurred without the breach of warranty and if such loss was reasonably foreseeable to a person in the same or similar position as the defendant.

Any award to the plaintiff must be reduced by a reasonable allowance for the plaintiff's use of the (name vehicle). A reasonable allowance for use is calculated from the number of miles used by the plaintiff up to the date of the third attempt to repair the same nonconformity which is the subject of the claim, or the twentieth cumulative business day when the vehicle is out of service by reason of repair of one or more nonconformities, whichever occurs first. The number of miles used by the plaintiff is multiplied by the purchase price of the vehicle and divided by 120,000.¹³

Finally, as to this issue on which the plaintiff has the burden of proof, if you find by the greater weight of the evidence the amount of damages the plaintiff is entitled to recover from the defendant, then it would be your duty to write that amount in the blank space provided.

5 A prerequisite to the plaintiff bringing an action for damages under the authority of this section is that the vehicle be returned to the defendant. Alternatively, in an action under N.C. Gen. Stat. § 20-351.3, the plaintiff may seek specific performance of the manufacturer's obligation to "replace the vehicle with a comparable new motor vehicle." Id.

GENERAL CIVIL VOLUME

N.C. Gen. Stat. § 20-351.3(a)

12 N.C.P.I.-Civil 569.40; N.C. Gen. Stat. § 20-351.3(b)(1). See also Newton, supra at 1091 n. 109 ("[C]onsequential damages would presumably include out-of-pocket expenses such as towing fees, car rental, and hotel expenses" (citations omitted)). In addition, liquidated and uncontested monetary liabilities of the plaintiff to third parties arising as a consequence of the breach of warranty would qualify as a "monetary loss." An example would be money owed to a hospital or other medical provider. The plaintiff's personal injuries (e.g., loss of a limb, pain and suffering, loss of earning capacity, etc.) do not constitute monetary loss. Recovery of damages for these injuries may be sought in conjunction with other claims for relief.
