

205.65 COMMON LAW DUTY TO SOUND HORN IN PASSING.¹

The law² requires the operator of a vehicle to sound his horn when overtaking and passing another vehicle if, under the same or similar circumstances, a reasonably careful and prudent operator would have done so.

(The operator must sound his horn in a timely manner, that is, the operator must sound his horn in reasonable time to afford the operator ahead an opportunity to avoid injury or damage.³)

Thus, when one overtakes and attempts to pass a vehicle traveling in the same direction, without (timely) sounding the horn when a reasonably careful and prudent operator under the same or similar circumstances would have done so, such failure would be negligence.⁴

1. This instruction should not be used when there is an ordinance prohibiting horn blowing.

3. Use this paragraph and the parenthetical reference to "timely" in the last paragraph only when the horn was blown but a question of timeliness is raised.

4. For an instruction on the duty to sound a horn to warn a child or a confused or intoxicated person on a roadway see N.C.P.I.-Civil 211.45.
